Open letter

Dear Mr McAuslan,

7th March 2011

I am writing following the recent article "Cabin air quality" in the February / March 2011 issue of BALPA's "The Log" magazine.

The accuracy and content of the article was most disappointing, considering it was written for professional, intelligent, fee paying airline pilots who expect every opportunity to make informed decisions on their health based on the latest scientific evidence available.

Several national newspapers and Flight International have written more accurate and balanced articles over the past few years, especially since your own unequivocal conclusions at the 'International Contaminated Air Conference' in London, April 2005.

As BALPA claims to be 'open and transparent' on the CAQ issue, I request - once again - that the Aerotoxic Association be allowed to pay to advertise in "The Log" in the future - so that your paying members can enjoy freedom of choice, speech and expression on this serious health issue.

Yours sincerely,

John Hoyte
